The Handley Page, Halifax L 'F - Freddie' Bomber which crashed at Merrist Wood in A Second World War air drama over Surrey had its sequel 55 years later with the unearthing of an aircraft engine in Rolls-Royce Merlin XX Engine recovered in at farmland at Merrist Wood, Worplesdon. 35 Squadron MkI Halifax No aircraft were lost on the raid but L was intercepted on its return by an RAF fighter that had been sent up to cover a raid on Portsmouth. L became the victim of 'friendly' fire, the first Halifax lost of the war. He explained that these kits consist of various styrene sheets which have been heated and vacuum drawn to create the basic moulded components of the Halifax (fuselage, wings, tailplane etc). Each component has to be carefully cut from the thin styrene sheet and then assembled correctly using exploded diagrams rather than assembly advice.
