Price New from Used from Hardcover "Please retry" Author: Oliver Kirkpatrick. Based on a Jamaican folktale, a modest story of born enemies who come to depend on their feud and eventually on each other. Naja is the last snake on the island, Mangus the descendant of mongooses brought from India to exterminate snakes, but fighting--never to a finish--brings them closer together, each rescuing the other on occasion, until they're caught napping--literally--by two zookeepers.

Shelves: behavior, english-language-learners, folktale, science-literature-and-poetry This book is a great read-aloud. I would use it across elementary grade levels to model reading skills; such as,making predictions, inference, reading between the lines, and imagery/5(1). Mangus the Mongoose is supposed to kill Naja, the last living snake in Jamaica, but complications arise when the two begin to like each other. Shows definite wear, and perhaps considerable marking on .
