Get this from a library! Social justice and human rights in India. [Subhash Chandra Singh;] -- Contributed articles. While social justice and human rights are two different concepts, they are closely linked. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights includes economic, social and cultural rights such as the right to health, security in the event of unemployment, and education. Caste discrimination goes against what we learned about social justice and human rights. These ideals are based on the premise that all people, no matter their race, ethnicity, gender, caste, marital status or age should be treated with respect and . The hapless citizen, of course, suffers in silence. The number of people in India who are suffering in silence must be legion. Almost the entire nation is suffering in silence. There is no discipline, and there are hardly any morals. The absences of these vital traits of character signify the absence of social and economic justice.
